Investing in securities involves risk, including the potential loss of principal invested. There is no guarantee that a diversified portfolio will outperform a non-diversified portfolio in any given market environment. No investment strategy, such as asset allocation, can guarantee a profit or protect against loss in periods of declining values. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results.

Performance data shown represents past performance, which is not a guarantee of future results. Inherent in any investment is the potential for loss as well as the potential for gain. Investment returns and principal value will fluctuate, so investors' shares, when sold, may be worth more or less than their original cost. Current performance may be lower or higher than the performance data cited. Investing involves risk, including possible loss of principal. It should not be assumed that the recommendations made in the future will be profitable or will equal the performance of the securities referenced in this site.

Fixed income investments are subject to various risks including changes in interest rates, credit quality, inflation risk, market valuations, prepayments, corporate events, tax ramifications and other factors. Foreign investments involve special risks including greater economic, political, and currency fluctuation risks, which may be even greater in emerging markets. Investments in real estate have various risks including possible lack of liquidity and devaluation based on adverse economic and regulatory changes. Please note that rebalancing investments may cause investors to incur transaction costs and, when rebalancing a non-retirement account, taxable events will be created that may increase your tax liability. Rebalancing a portfolio cannot assure a profit or protect against a loss in any given market environment. Investments in stocks of small companies involve additional risks. Smaller companies typically have a higher risk of failure, and are not as well established as larger blue-chip companies.
